

The Real Big Bang

A Theory Revised

If the above title relates to a theory related to an occurrence of the past then the question needing to be answered should be “What was the Big Bang?”, however, many actually think that this title is related to a continuing occurrence and as a result maybe the experts today should be asked “What is the Big Bang”? Sound silly? Well, for some of us, it was always taught that this bang thing was the start of the different galaxies that are found throughout space, you know that Final Frontier<sup>1</sup>. It was supposed to have occurred at Time Zero, plus one billionth of a second. And for those who learned that this was the real Big Bang they were also taught that it would be the start of that evolutionary cycle which would eventually introduce life, starting with those tiny amoeba, and they are still around, (well maybe not the same ones but their children’s, children’s, children’s, etc., etc., etc. generation x  $10^{800}$ ) all the way to the introduction of the more advanced<sup>2</sup> mammal animal group which eventually would include the human animal. Oh, and for those of you who do not believe in this change over time, those who accepted learning of this evolutionary process believe it to be the one related to the creation and change of the only life chain known so far, at least on this planet.

Now, most of the properly educated independent thinking individuals on the planet agree that this is true. But you know what, a few of the more advanced do not? And, why have these few changed their minds? Well, it appears that when it comes to the hidden secret of this very powerful explosion that it really was not the most powerful transfer of unknown or misunderstood energy particles to ever occur. Some of us have found out that this historical Big Bang, which was thought by many to be the biggest bang in total history really should not be defined as such. Now, it may not be the concept which is wrong, but certainly the use of the term relating to the supposed singular event must be wrong as it can now be proven not to be the top ranking power release. There may have been a big one (Note: This is singular!) a long time ago but there continues to be so many seemingly smaller ones every day that over time these smaller ones have actually created a far greater overall force. Again, that is when their total hidden energies are accumulated. This newly explained but previously misunderstood force is obviously far greater than the original one when it comes to its accumulated force measurement, as this force only continues to grow with the addition of the supposed individual powers required for each creation. It is now known that the billions of these smaller ones are believed by most human animals to be the big real ones. And it appears that they are right. Hence, today I hereby accept recognition for my Albert Einstein level of extremely unique thinking credentials and bring to all of you a new Big Bang Theory. This new theory will be properly defined below using commonly accepted analytical tools and it will be then that the unquestionable evidentiary facts are shown to prove the valid existence of that force. So, please take a moment and learn that this new theory is being presented here for the first time. Now, here we go.

According to almost every current culture in this world the real “Big Bang” actually repeats itself up to as much as a million times every day, oh, and that is earth day. But for the most part this real Bang is not actually seen at its starting point, which makes it more like the other one, but only when viewing the related past events as they become visible over time and their sources are found to be very powerful. Now, are you ready to learn what the real one is? Well, this real one relates to the most important genetic differences found between the male and female human animals and that is that which leads to the creation of another one of them. Watch out. Be careful now in learning about this powerful force. This most important real “Big Bang” ignition actually relates to the well known but hidden force supported by a genetic theory that supports the belief that men and women are both contributors to that extremely accurate but very small particle attack which eventually leads to the birth of children here on earth. Oh, and by the way these are human children only and, before many begin questioning any of this, the two involved in these real “Big Bangs” are supposedly equal contributors.

Wait a minute! Are we talking about sex and if so with what result? And, how can this belief in being equal contributors to the real Big Bang be true? Well, this newly introduced hidden force involved actually relates to the extremely powerful and little known chemistry of that very powerful male only element addition to a new human animal birth, better known as sperm. Now, it is without question that this powerful element exists and its hidden power can be easily proven when the concept of conception is properly analyzed. Most people, excuse me, human animals, know that when the male sperms, remember that they travel as a group, meet up with the female egg, and again it will only be one of the contesting sperms which wins, the sperm and the egg mutually agree to a lifetime period of co-existence. And it is important to understand that this will be a binding marriage contract where neither side can ever get out of its commitment. Well, once the contract is agreed to, you know when the egg allows the sperm to enter its premises, it is then that they begin to work together. After the next nine months in the female body, and remember that this is an average period as some can spend more time inside the female’s body while some want to get out earlier, a sign of future disrespect, well possibly, they produce another human animal. And this new human animal, even when less than 9 or 10 pounds at birth, all comes from the linkage of that single sperm and the small egg while in the female womb. Wow, believe it or not this is the real “Big Bang”. The collision of these two tiny particles leads to the creation of one big one. Amazing, isn’t it? And who thought that the development of the many solar systems was incredible? Here, on this tiny planet, the female acceptance of this incredible theory, which allows for male control, sets the male dominance of society as the proper legal and ethical basis for societal structures. The powerful male agent found in the sperm is proof of the “Bigger Bang”! Learning this can be truly overwhelming. This is absolutely amazing. Oh, do you want to wait another minute to think about this? Well, start counting...

OK, your minute is up. Now, in order to properly understand and accept the existence of this previously misunderstood and underrated power element we do need to look more closely at the hidden power of that male contribution, Mr. Sperm. It seems that the male contribution, you know Mr. Sperm or should it be Sir Sperm, is the most powerful chemical force which the male side of the species adds to a human animal’s composition. And the size of this force is still being questioned or should it be said “challenged” by most men and of course some women. But first we will deal with the men. It appears that there are cultural differences which lead to these challenges even being different but most men claim to be around ½ of every child and that is 50% of the entire child, in most of the well-educated parts of the world, that is. That would not be too questionable however, in some of the less developed nations, there are much wider gaps when the male's claims to their additions are even more so. When studied often these differences in percentages are dependant on a number of issues and this issue of claim differences will be discussed in the next paragraph. But first it must be understood that in most nations where the right wing males control their societies, again those nations where the males control almost all aspects of their society's life as they profess to be the ones who were given the right to be in charge and as a result they must be the ones responsible for almost everything including the creation and development of their human animal family, there are a few theoretical and arithmetic problems which need answering when it comes to this new force issue. And it is the arithmetic problems which are the most needing answering.

Yes, these are arithmetic, you know number problems. To start there is a questionable difference when it comes to this supposed 50% contribution made by the males. It seems that, in these male dominated societies, the males claim to have put more into some of the children that are born than the egg giving and womb feeding mothers. In the religious right wing societies the human animal mothers are educated to believe that they are very wrong in thinking that they are the major factor when it comes to being pregnant for nine months and delivering the children. The males in the right wing societies seem to think that they are the primary source of life development for the animal in their selected female's womb. And what should be of greater concern when it comes to accurate reporting should be that some of the over 50% male dominance cultures claim that the fathers are 90% of the sons and only 75%, and sometimes less, of the daughters. The laws of these right wing world societies give their males the rights to decide everything about their cultures as their part has been proven to be far greater. They believe that if we were all properly educated we would learn that the power of the sperm is in itself proof of the male's power and this proof gives them the right to dominate human life from the point of conception all the way into the everlasting life as described in almost all cultures and societies.

STOP! Wait one minute... OK, your time is up. Some groups, particularly the large women's groups of the more open societies are beginning to question this belief. These new and real thinking females are the ones who can claim to factually prove that the dominating rights of the human males of the world are actually wrong. Oh, oh. Is there a problem with my new Big Bang theory? These anti-new Big Bang theory accepting individuals could actually be starting a reversal of power trend for the first time in the history of this world? Now, these new better educated human animal female leaders do have a somewhat logical basis for their questioning. And to some of us, and this "us" does include a small percentage of human male animals, they might be right. How can that tiny sperm, for which all of the actual parts are well known, be so overstated in its power and how did this assumed and overrated power source concept ever evolve to the point it is at for many today? Well, didn't the physically stronger male animals have the ability to control their females until the cultural need for their physical strength, which is still required to win a basic animal fight, declined? Without question these revised Big Bang theory percentages of ownership need to be questioned as the challenges being made by the new thinkers of the world should take most of us back at least a millennium or two to learn more about the misunderstood power of the male part of the species. Now, accurate history should actually prove to be more important than a human animal's created science. This misunderstood male contribution from the supposedly powerful sperm was really inbred at the starting point of human animal's brain development which became a basic part the human animal's instinctual desire to foster the growth of its sect of animals. Oh, no, here goes this new theory, and I hope you learn that it wasn't mine. I am reborn and now know even more.

Today, every advanced society on earth must learn that their male animal's contribution related to childbirth is really close to zero and once known the same percentage should apply to the male controls of all societies. This is very important for when learned correctly the historical male superiority rights will be found to have been a major part of mankind's errors which lead to far more damage than good. Judging from the past acceptance of male dominance in this world, when it comes to this statement, the proof is in their pudding. Oh, excuse me again, their sperm, as theirs is not the primordial pudding that existed before this earth was formed. It looks like the human males are not the source of this powerful element after all. Once this is learned it is without question that the other sex needs to take on some new responsibilities.

And hopefully the female human animals will take responsibility for the needed changes in the way this place is run. Oh, and by the way, to make this easier for you females of today to accept this, it is well known that the female side of the animal man will eventually take over the known human race as medical experts now forecast that the decline of the male part of the population, due to the deficits related to the Y chromosome, is inevitable. Your XY structure is actually far more powerful and simply hidden at the moment. Hey, do you want another non-scientific theory related to who should be in charge? This possible opposing force developing human reaction to history could eventually take over that force which gave birth to the original animal man's Real Big Bang in order for it to become the female version by the year 10243. If and when that happens, at least one female human animal should then receive the latest version of the Albert Einstein Unique Thinking Credentials Award.

<sup>2</sup>The word "advanced" is commonly used when dealing with the human animal but it definitely needs to be redefined when some of the other animals are properly studied, you know, those animals which are less likely to kill any others of their group for no reason whatsoever.
